

The Over/Under

Behind The Life

1 Boat. 7 Crew. 20 Guests. No matter what goes wrong, never, ever let them see you sweat.

The Over/Under is a rare and unprecedented peek, your porthole view behind-the-scenes of the life of a liveaboard dive crew. Narrated by Aaron Faulls, host of “Into The Drink,” it stars the crew of a world-class 40-meter scuba diving yacht and the passengers who join them aboard week in and week out. Life on these vessels is pure luxury for guests, and seemingly for the crew—but make no mistake, it can be sheer hell for the men and women who help keep it afloat. Some of us daydream about telling our bosses to shove it, pointing at the map and deciding where to go. These crew members have done just that in the pursuit of living the dream. This show is about life at sea, the good, the bad, and the ugly; how seven crew members work together to make the most incredible week for the 20 guests who love the ocean almost as much as they do. When they’re not putting out fires, saving lives, battling illegal fishermen, filling high-pressure air tanks and preparing meals, they’re making friends—and enemies—with the passengers they’re responsible for. The interaction is sometimes shocking—and always highly rewarding.

“The Deadliest Catch crew has crabs, and this crew has to deal with scuba tourists from around the globe.”

The show appeals to a broad audience, including a young, active, outdoorsy, fun-loving demographic. With the international destinations featured in each episode, we attract the millions of divers worldwide who are waiting to watch and be a part of this great adventure.
